

Dear Mr. Powell,

The airwaves belong to the American people as does the FCC. The FCC exists to serve all the people. There are more important things in life besides business. Free speech and diverse discourse are two of them. Two of the most important tenets on which of American values and Democracy rely. The American public has not been made fully aware of the consequences of a consolidated media. Most don't even know what is occurring. I suggest that before you act you gain the full support of the American people by putting the FCC's impending decision to a national vote. Send fliers listing the proposed changes along with a ballot. So what if it takes more time and expense. What's the rush? Frequencies will still be there. And media owners will not go broke in the meantime.
